CLASS PREPARES STUDENTS FOR FOOD INDUSTRY

MISSOULA –

It's not easy to get a restaurant job with no experience beforehand, but with the new "Intro to Food Service Industry" class at The University of Montana College of Technology, students can get that experience in the classroom.

The course runs Oct. 14 - Dec. 15 and is held from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

The ten-week course is for five credits, and financial aid may be available to qualified applicants.

Students will learn the basics of culinary practices, techniques and recipes used in today's food service operations. It's a great start for students who may wish to become a chef but are unsure of where to begin.

For more information call Kim Collucci, COT outreach associate, at 406-243-7812 or e-mail kim.collucci@umontana.edu.
